Tantra & Agama

The Science of Worship and the Architecture of the Cosmos.

Often misunderstood as distinct from Vedic heritage...

Tantra and Agama are the rigorous, systematic sciences of a complete system of worship in the Indian knowledge tradition.

➤ Firmly connected to the Atharvaveda—the Veda of personal spiritual practice.

Ā + gam =
= "To come"

The highest repository of knowledge, flowing down through generations via the lineage of forefathers (Guru-parampara).

The Four Subjects of Agama

1. Creation & Dissolution

2. Worship of Deities

3. Practices for All (Sadhana)

4. Preparation & Consecration (Purascharan)

Tantra: "To become manifest" /
"Creation of the world from the seed."

Shabda (Sound)

The Triad of Ascent

Together, mantra and yantra are employed as tools for ascending the hierarchy of tattvas.

Two Scales of Complete Worship

Personal Level

- ✓ Setting: The Home Shrine.
- ✓ Focus: Daily puja, lighting lamps, mantra recitation.

Institutional Level

- ✓ Setting: The Temple or Ashram.
- ✓ Focus: Large-scale communal sadhana.
- ✓ Origin: The refined, parallel evolution of vast Vedic Yajnas and Satras.

“Yat Pinde Tat Brahmande.”

(What is in the body is in the universe.)

Tantra gives practical form to this principle. By understanding the mysterious connection between the microcosm (Pindanda) and the macrocosm (Brahmanda), the seeker unravels the mystery of the universe through their own body.

1

Observe the Micro: Sit in your home shrine. Notice the symbols—idols, lamps, flowers, incense. Observe the immediate effect each symbol has on your mind.

2

Observe the Macro: Visit a temple. Pay attention to the journey from the entrance to the sanctum. Notice how the architecture—shapes, height, light, and fragrance—shifts your inner experience.

3

Observe the Bridge: In a quiet moment, observe your breath. Feel how the simple act of inhaling and exhaling reflects the universe's infinite cycle of creation and dissolution.
