

The Cosmic Mirror

Purusha, Prakriti, and the Cycles of Existence.

An exploration of Indian Knowledge Systems and the universal geometry of Creation, Preservation, and Dissolution.

The Fundamental Axiom of Correspondence

Yat piṇḍe tat brahmāṇḍe

What is in the body (pinda) is also in the universe (brahmanda).

A core claim of Indian thought is that inner human experience and outer cosmic reality operate by the exact same laws. They are perfectly mirrored.

The Foundational Duality of Sankhya Philosophy

Puruṣa

Nature: Pure consciousness, equanimity, and unlimited bliss. The principle beyond all activity.

State during Samadhi: The sole remaining active principle.

Prakṛti

Nature: The totality of all physical and mental activities (body, senses, mind, intellect, and ego).

State during Samadhi: Becomes entirely inactive (a state of 'niskriyata' or dissolution).

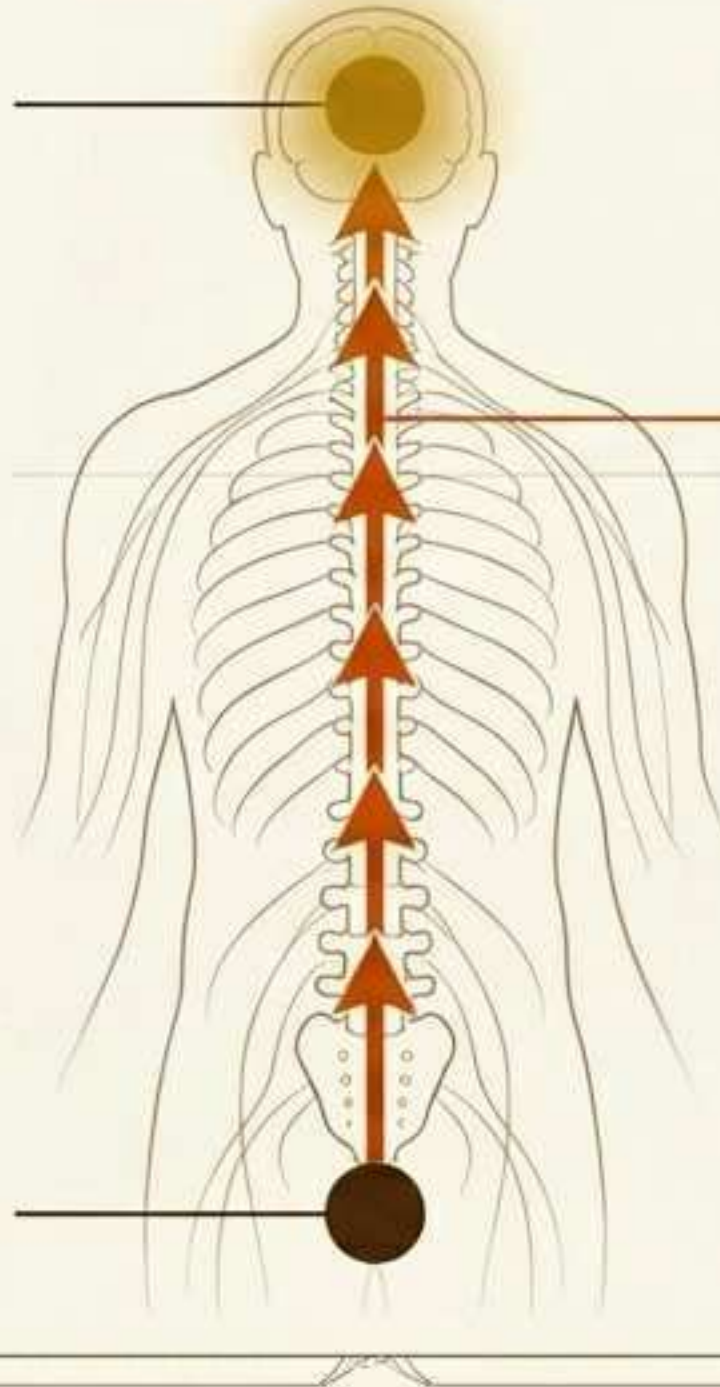

The Anatomy of the Inner Journey

Sahasrāra (Samadhi)

Consciousness moves beyond the brainstem into the brain itself. Sense and action organs are completely still. Pure Purusha remains.

Mūlādhāra (Wakefulness)

Full control over the body exists, along with full external awareness. Jnanendriyas (senses) and Karmendriyas (action organs) are fully active.

Ascending journey through the spinal cord. Control over body parts diminishes; breathing and heart function slow down.

The Mechanics of the Complete Cycle

The Universal Geometry of Time

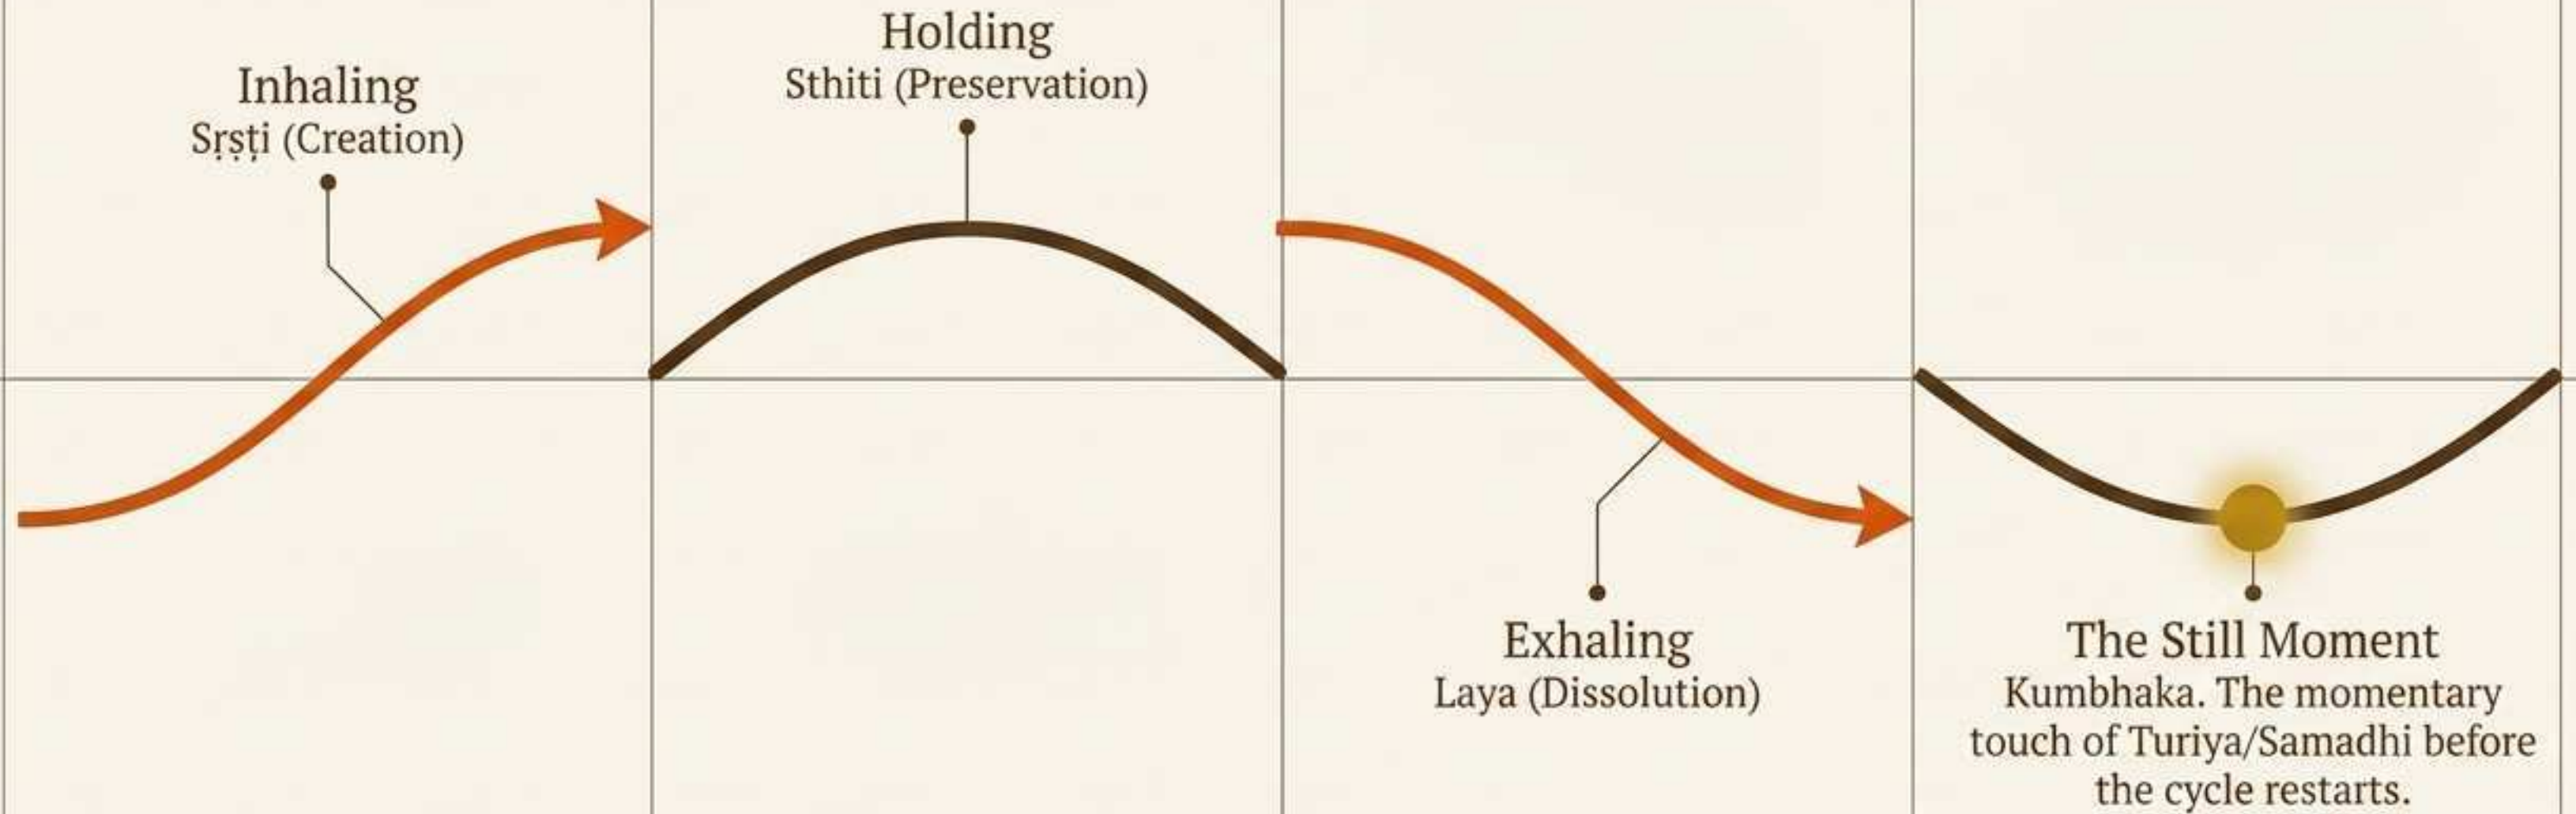

These three phases govern the external universe, continuously repeating.

Synthesis: The Exact Cosmic Mirror

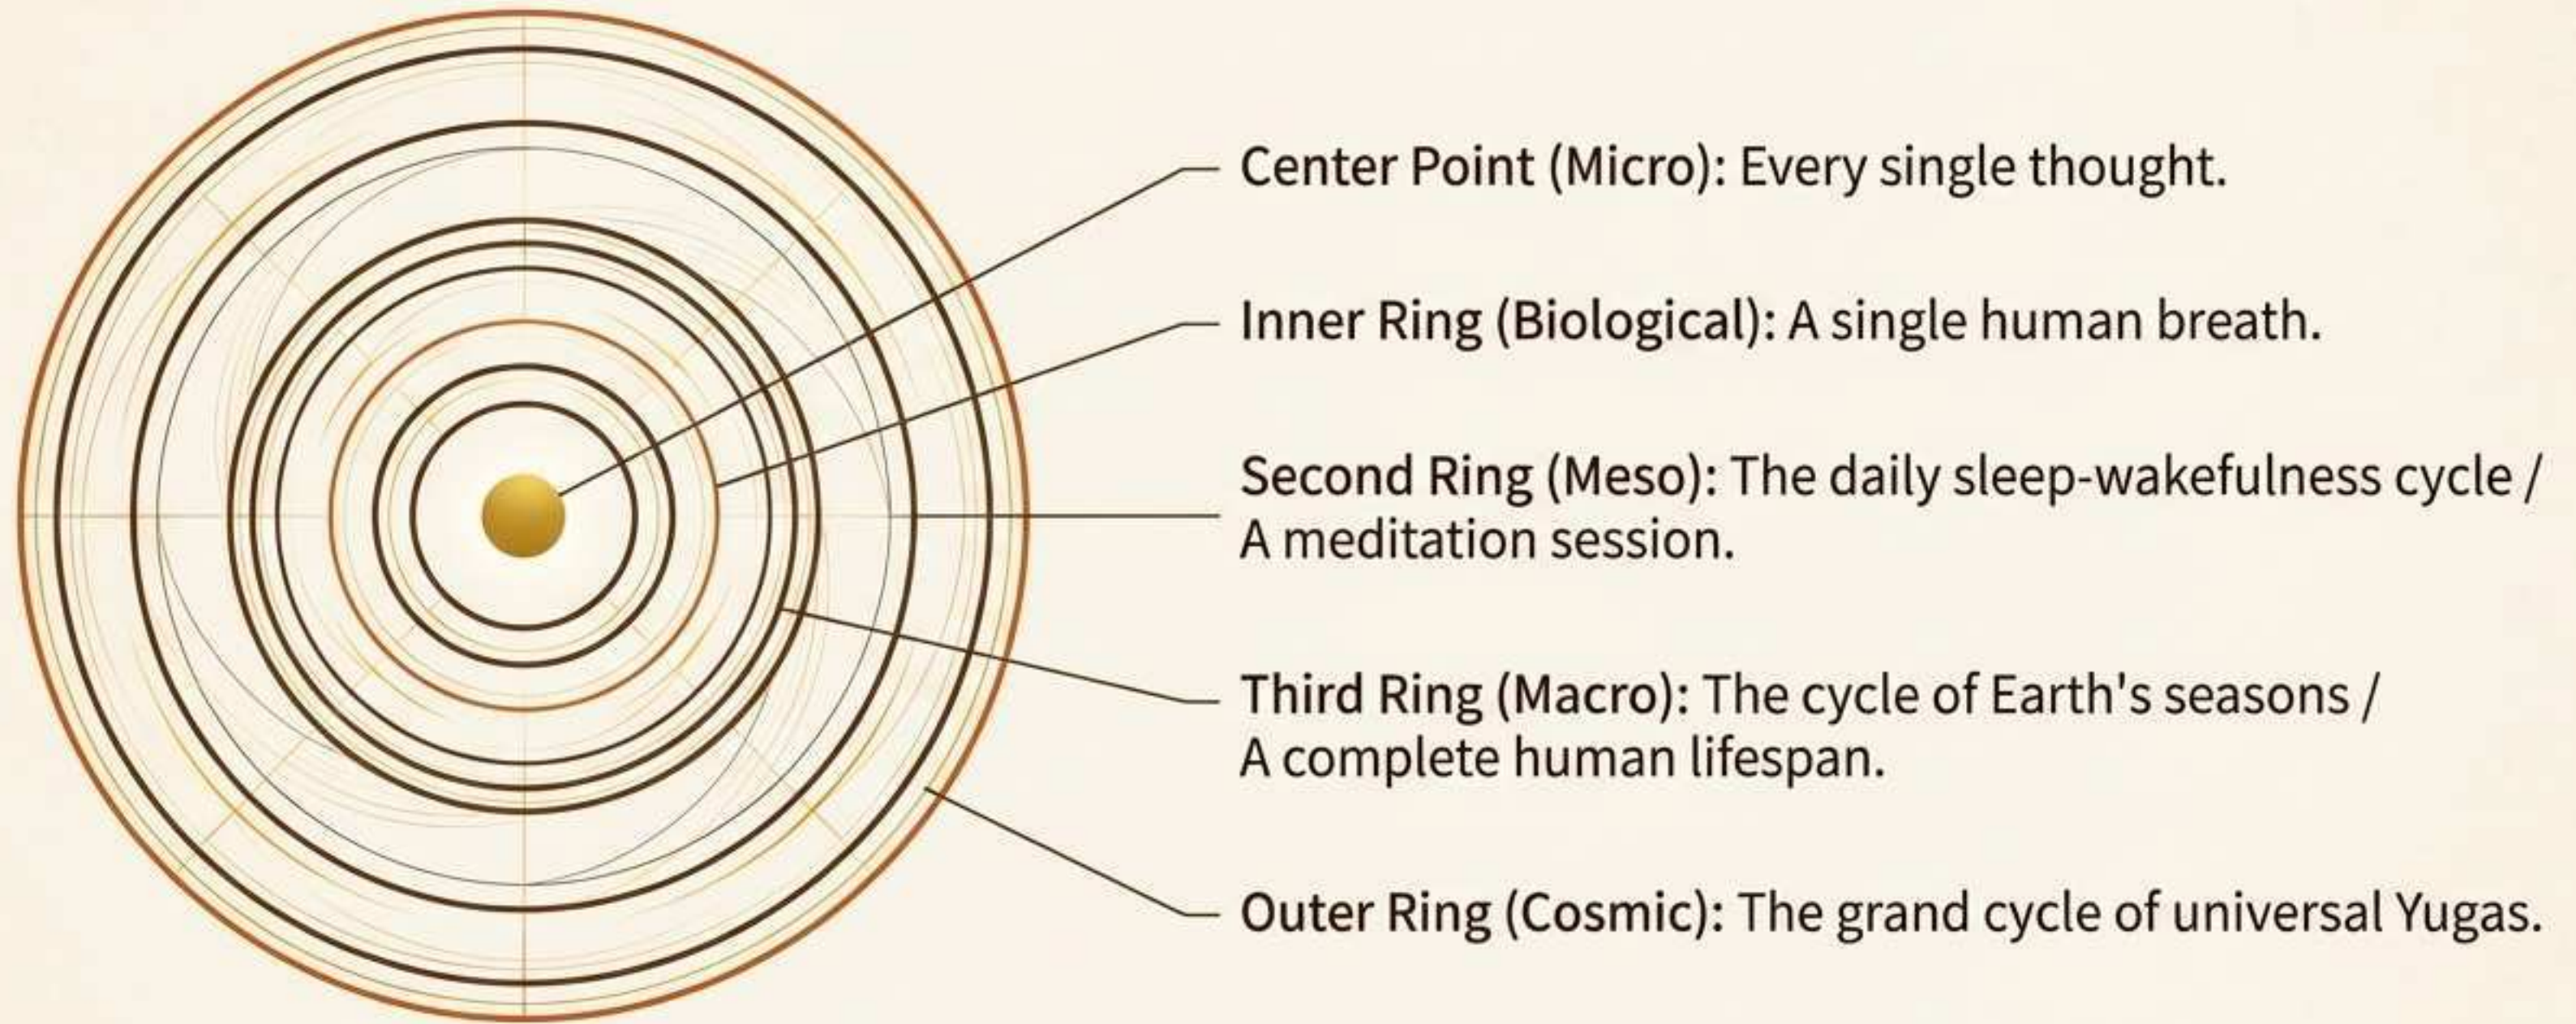

The Cosmic Phase (Macro)	The Inner Journey (Micro)	The Human State
Laya (Dissolution)	Ascending (Muladhara to Sahasrara)	Senses quietening, withdrawing from external world.
Sthiti (Preservation)	Stable States	Both the full Wakefulness at the base, and the pure Samadhi at the crown.
Sr̥ṣṭi (Creation)	Descending (Sahasrara to Muladhara)	Senses awakening, physical manifestation and external connection.

A Universe in a Single Breath

“The Indian tradition saw the cosmic cycle in every breath — this is not merely poetry, it is science.”

The Fractal Nature of Existence

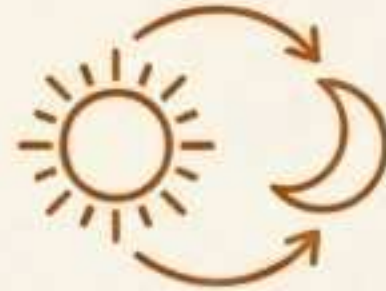

Inner and outer realities—regardless of size or duration—operate by the exact same tripartite law.

Experience the Mirror (Integration)

Observe the Breath

Take one conscious breath. Experience Srishti (inhaling), Sthiti (holding), and Laya (exhaling). Rest in the still moment of Kumbhaka.

Map Your Day

Analyze the rhythm of daily life: morning waking (Srishti), working through the day (Sthiti), and sleeping at night (Laya).

Find the Correspondence

Reflect on Yat pinde tat brahmande. Identify how processes in your body precisely mirror the macro processes in society and nature.

True practice is finding the cosmic cycle within the physical present.
