

Karma Reconsidered

Moving Beyond Divine Retribution to the Science of Skilful Action.

INSIGHTS FROM THE INDIAN KNOWLEDGE SYSTEMS (IKS)

Karma is Not Cosmic Revenge.

The Popular Misconception

- Driven by divine retribution.
- Managed by jealous or punishing deities.
- A system of punitive payback for past sins.

The IKS Reality

- ◆ Driven by systemic cause and effect.
- ◆ Governed by the mechanics of cycle completion.
- ◆ A system of skillful mapping for future self-realization.

The guiding principle in Indian thought is the completion of the cycle—not the appeasement of deities.

The Engine of Existence: The Avyakta-Vyakta Cycle

Karma is the engine driving the manifest process.

Action that successfully completes this cycle along the path of jnana is Dharma.

Action that disrupts it is Adharma.

Diagnosing Action: Papa vs. Punya

Papa (The Disruption)

Action performed incorrectly leading toward self-destruction. A deviation from the cycle.

Punya (The Restoration)

Corrective action that brings one back to the right path. It is not a tally of "good deeds," but functional repair that purifies past errors.

Kauśalam: The Skill in Action

buddhi-yukto jahā tiha ubhe sukr̥ta-duṣkr̥te tasmā d yogā ya yujyasva yogaḥ karmasu kauśalam

The Core Concept

How do we choose the right karma? Through total objectivity and an impartial perspective aimed solely at cycle completion.

The Insight

Skill in action is itself yoga (Bhagavad Gita 2.50). By using buddhi (intellect/wisdom), one transcends both mere virtue and vice to execute the ultimate skillful action.

The Architecture of Tendency

Step 1: The First Transgression

The first wrongdoing (papa) tramples the “bushes” of conscience.

Step 2: Diminished Inhibition

The second wrongdoing becomes easier because the first diminishes the shame around the act. Every action strengthens its associated tendency.

Step 3: Conscious Avoidance

Like an unused path, consciously avoiding the tendency allows the psychological inhibition to grow back.

Prayaschitta: The Mechanics of Correction

Special, deliberate acts performed to purify papas (errors).

Remorse is not passive guilt. It is the crucial psychological mechanism required to restore the internal inhibition around wrongful action, allowing genuine correction to occur.

Scaling Dharma: Chanakya's Hierarchy of Priorities

The Rule of Sacrifice

Lower levels (the inner circles) can and must be sacrificed for the preservation of higher levels (the outer circles).

The Apex Goal

Establishing Atma-dharma at the highest level ensures that everyone experiences the ultimate good: unlimited ananda (bliss).

Applied Hierarchy: Examining Arjuna's Choice

Context: Arjuna faces a paralyzing dilemma on the battlefield.

Option 1: Fight

Fight and kill beloved teachers, grandfathers, and close family.

Option 2: Retreat

Relinquish the claim to the kingdom and retire peacefully to the forest.

The Chanakya Diagnostic: Viewed purely through Chanakya's Hierarchy, retiring to the forest prioritizes the Individual/Family circle (avoiding personal grief). Fighting prioritizes the State/Atma-dharma circle, securing the systemic cycles of countless subjects.

Atma-Dharma: The Ultimate Resolution

- Karma is not a trap; it is the vehicle of existence.
- Papa provides the detours; Punya and Prayaschitta provide the course corrections.

- Skillful action (Kauśalam) aligns our daily micro-choices with macro-completion.

Atmanah tu kamaya

The desire of the Atman is supreme. When everyday action is directed toward this universal completion, the cycle is fulfilled.
