

The Waking Imprint of Supreme Peace

Atmaguna: The Qualities of the Self

How the profound experience of Samadhi permanently transforms the waking mind and personality.

The Outward Signs of Yogic Progress

Qualities that permanently manifest in the waking state from the experience of Turiya (the fourth state, or samadhi).

Key Insight:
These are not behaviors that can be taught from the outside. They are the natural, effortless results of developing a state of unlimited bliss.

The Residue of Consciousness

The Sleep Residue

Deep Sleep / Dreams

Waking State

Residue: Mood changes, reduced concentration, lingering fear or cheerfulness based on dreams.

The Samadhi Residue

Turiya (The 4th State)

Waking State

Residue (Atmaguna): Unlimited bliss, courage, complete transformation of thought, speech, and action.

The fruit of the samadhi experience is not just for that moment—it leaves a permanent imprint on the waking mind.

The Anatomy of Steady Wisdom (Sthitaprajna)

Like a tortoise drawing its limbs into its shell, the individual draws joy strictly from within. They function in the world like others, but never waver in understanding the true, internal source of joy.

The Architecture of the 8 Atmagunah

As listed in the Gautama Dharmasutra (1.8.23-24).

The Emotional Residue (Manas)

Daya

Compassion

Feeling pain at another's suffering and acting to help. The enlightened mind sees a reflection of itself in all beings.

Kshanti

Forbearance

Remaining steadfast through happiness and sorrow. Maintaining inner courage without boasting in victory or despairing in loss.

Anasuya

Non-envy

Complete absence of envy. When internal joy is found, there is no space left to covet external things.

The Purity of Being and Action (Body-Mind)

Shaucham

Cleanliness

Beyond bodily cleanliness, this is the deep purity of thoughts, emotions, and intentions.

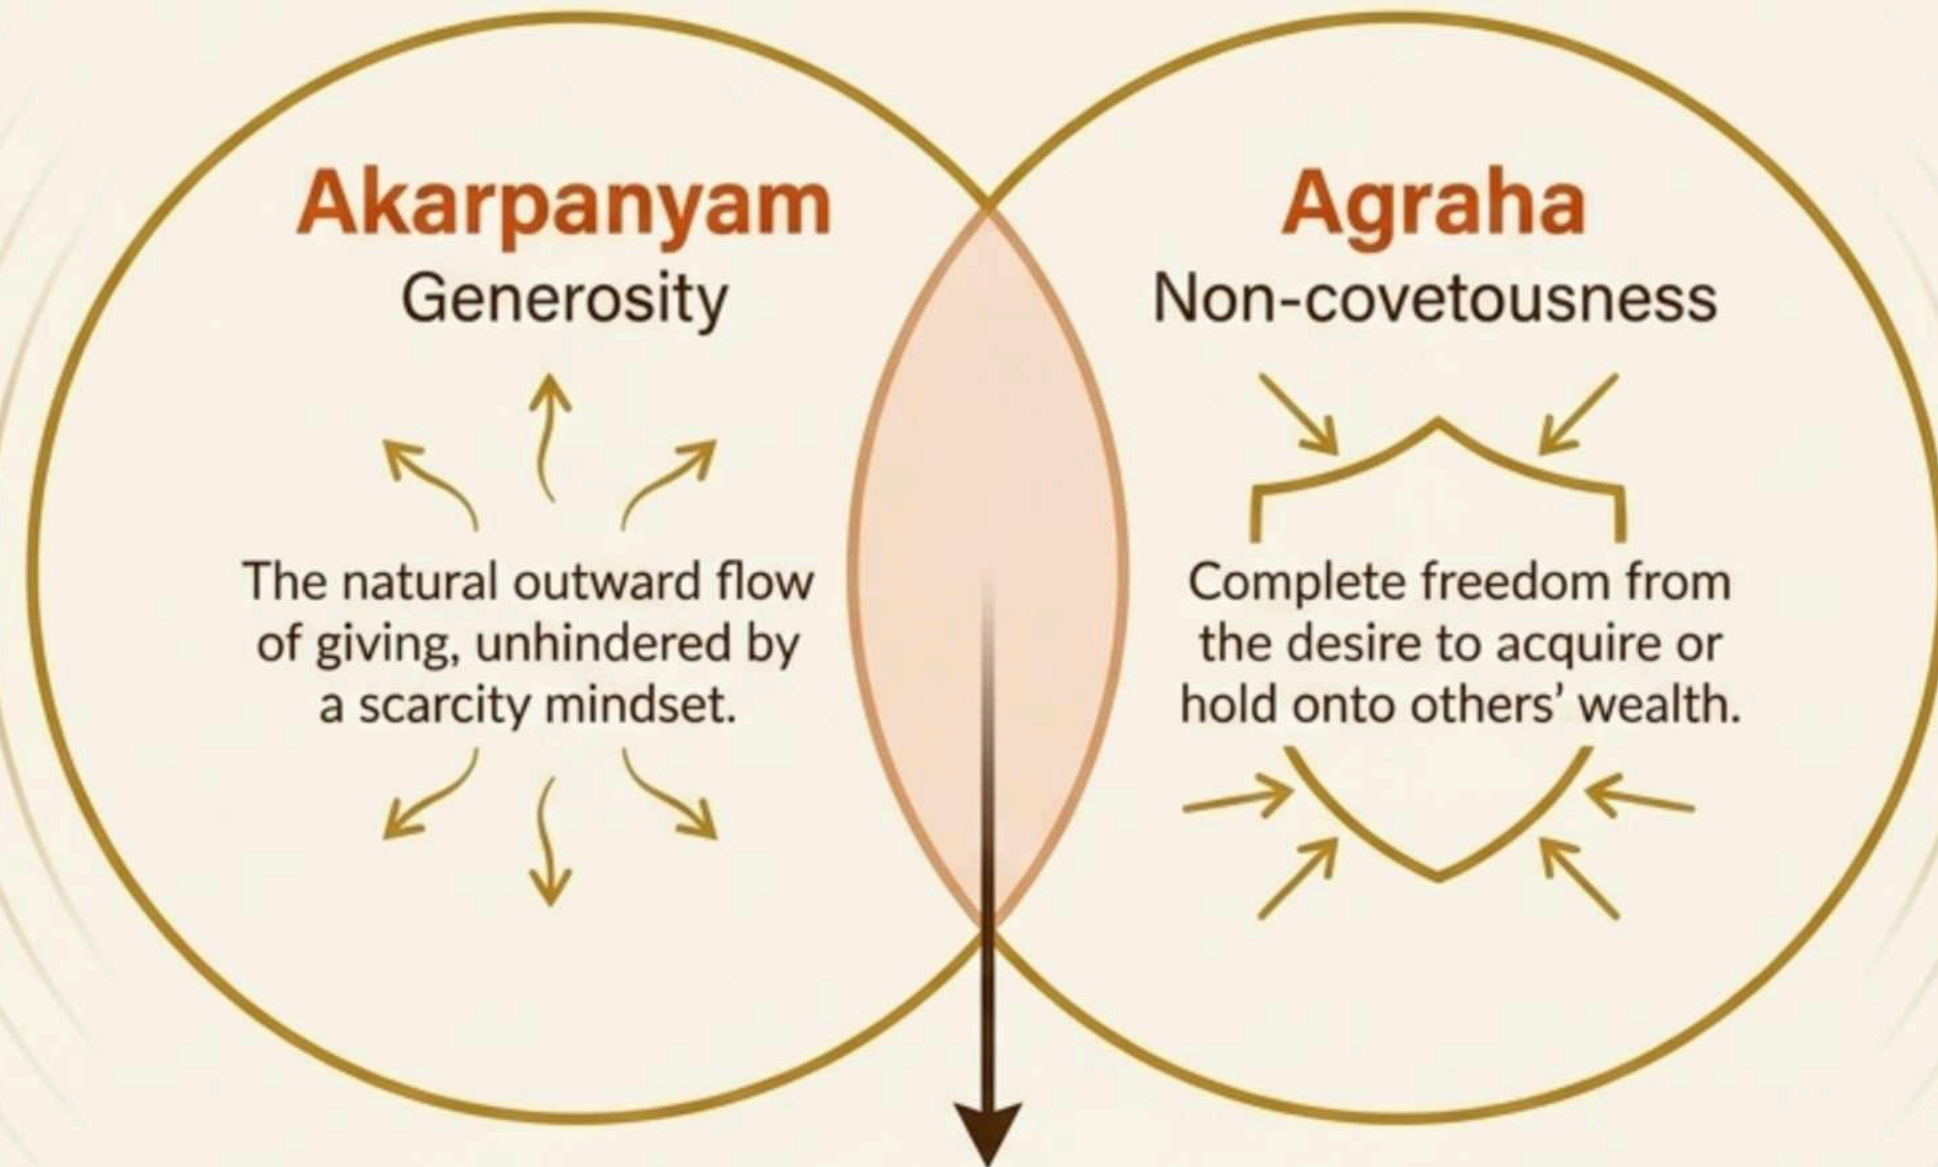

Anayasa

Absence of over-activity

Doing what needs to be done calmly, without agitation or restlessness.

The crucial difference is distinguishing between 'making an effort' and 'struggling anxiously.'

The Economics of Inner Wealth (Social)

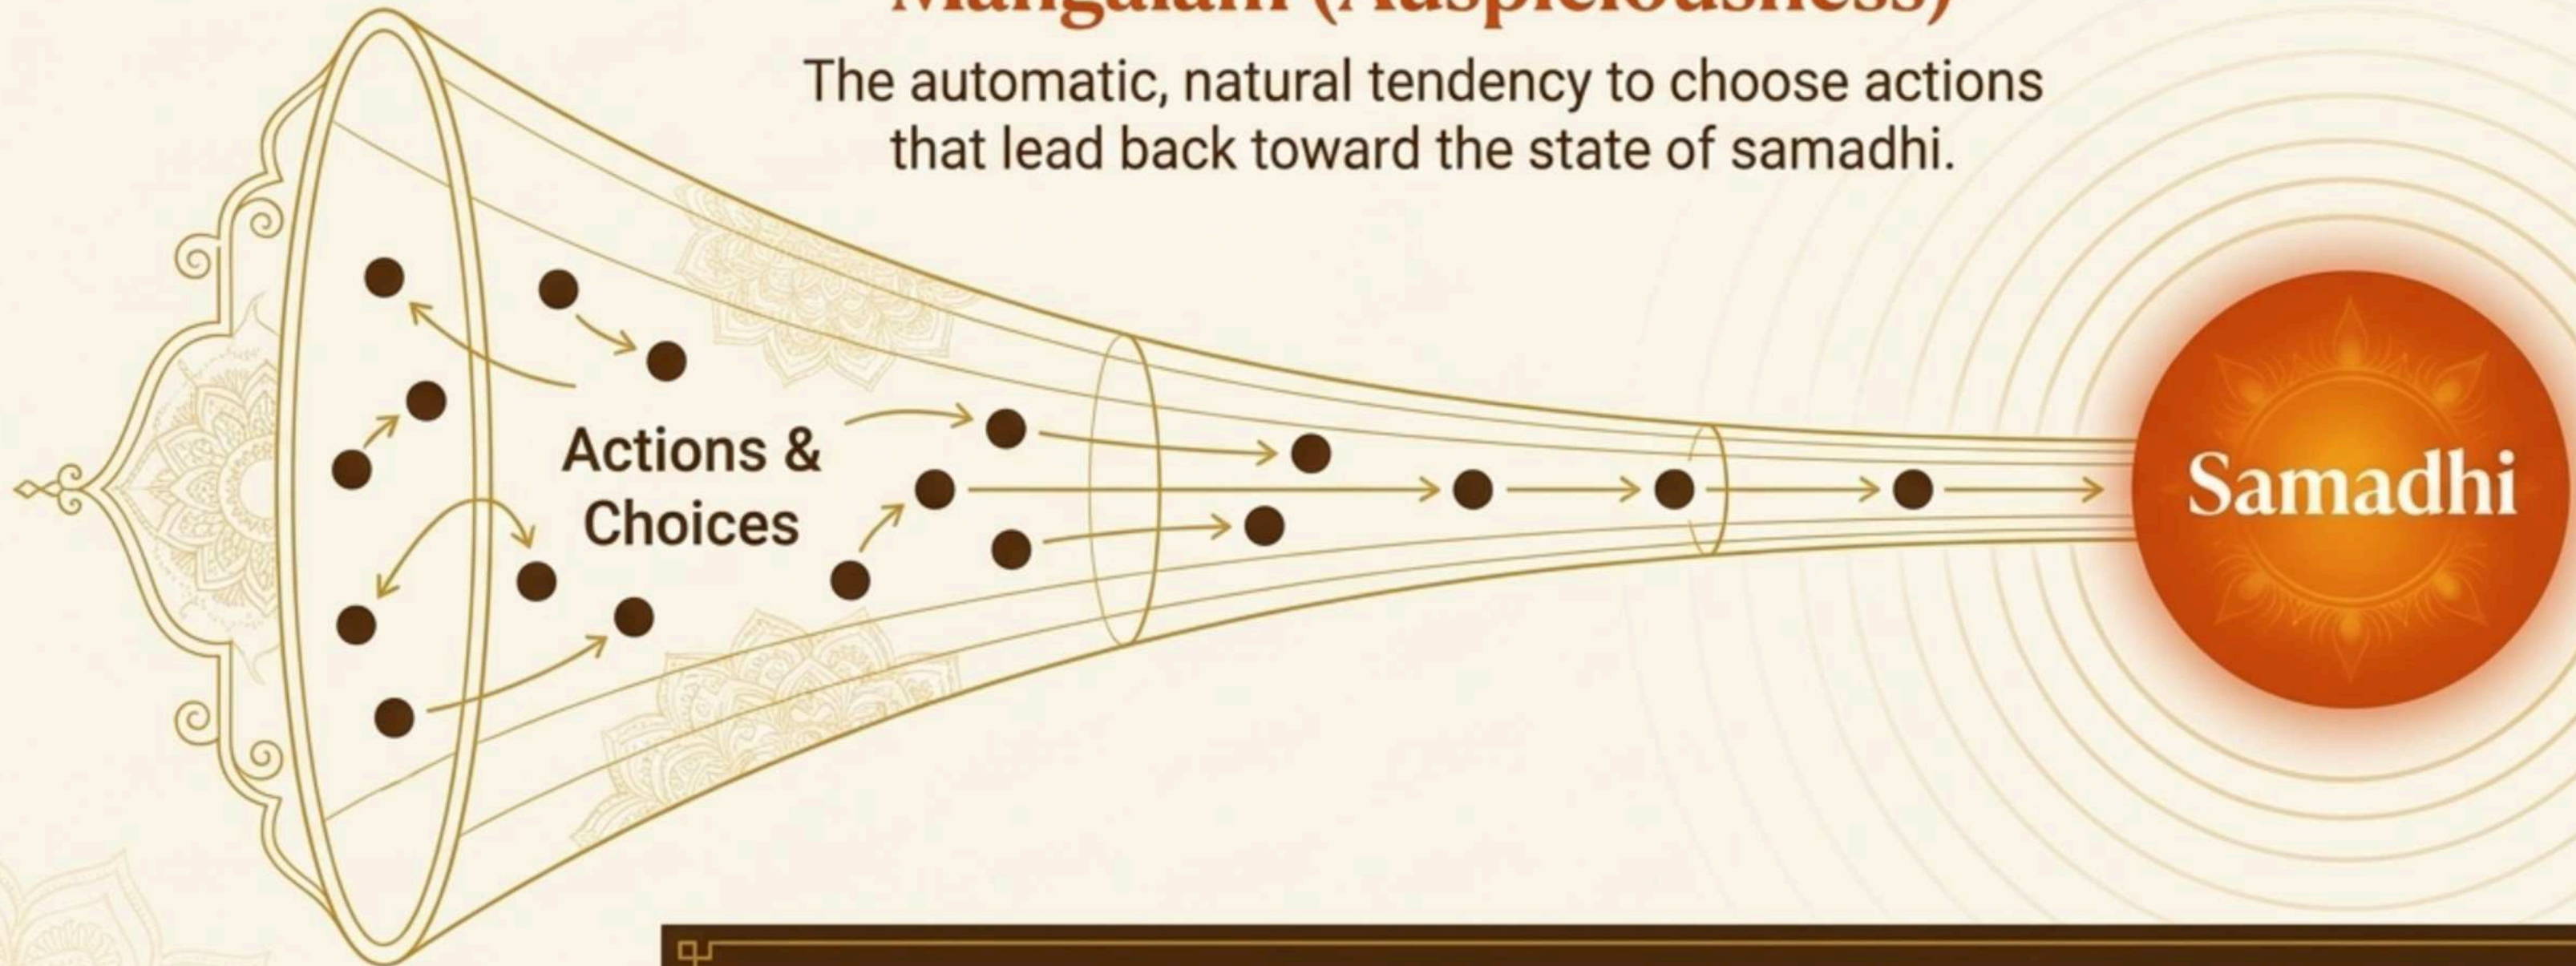

Connective Insight: Because the person possesses unlimited internal bliss, external accumulation becomes entirely irrelevant.

The Gravity of Auspicious Choice (Spiritual)

Mangalam (Auspiciousness)

The automatic, natural tendency to choose actions that lead back toward the state of samadhi.

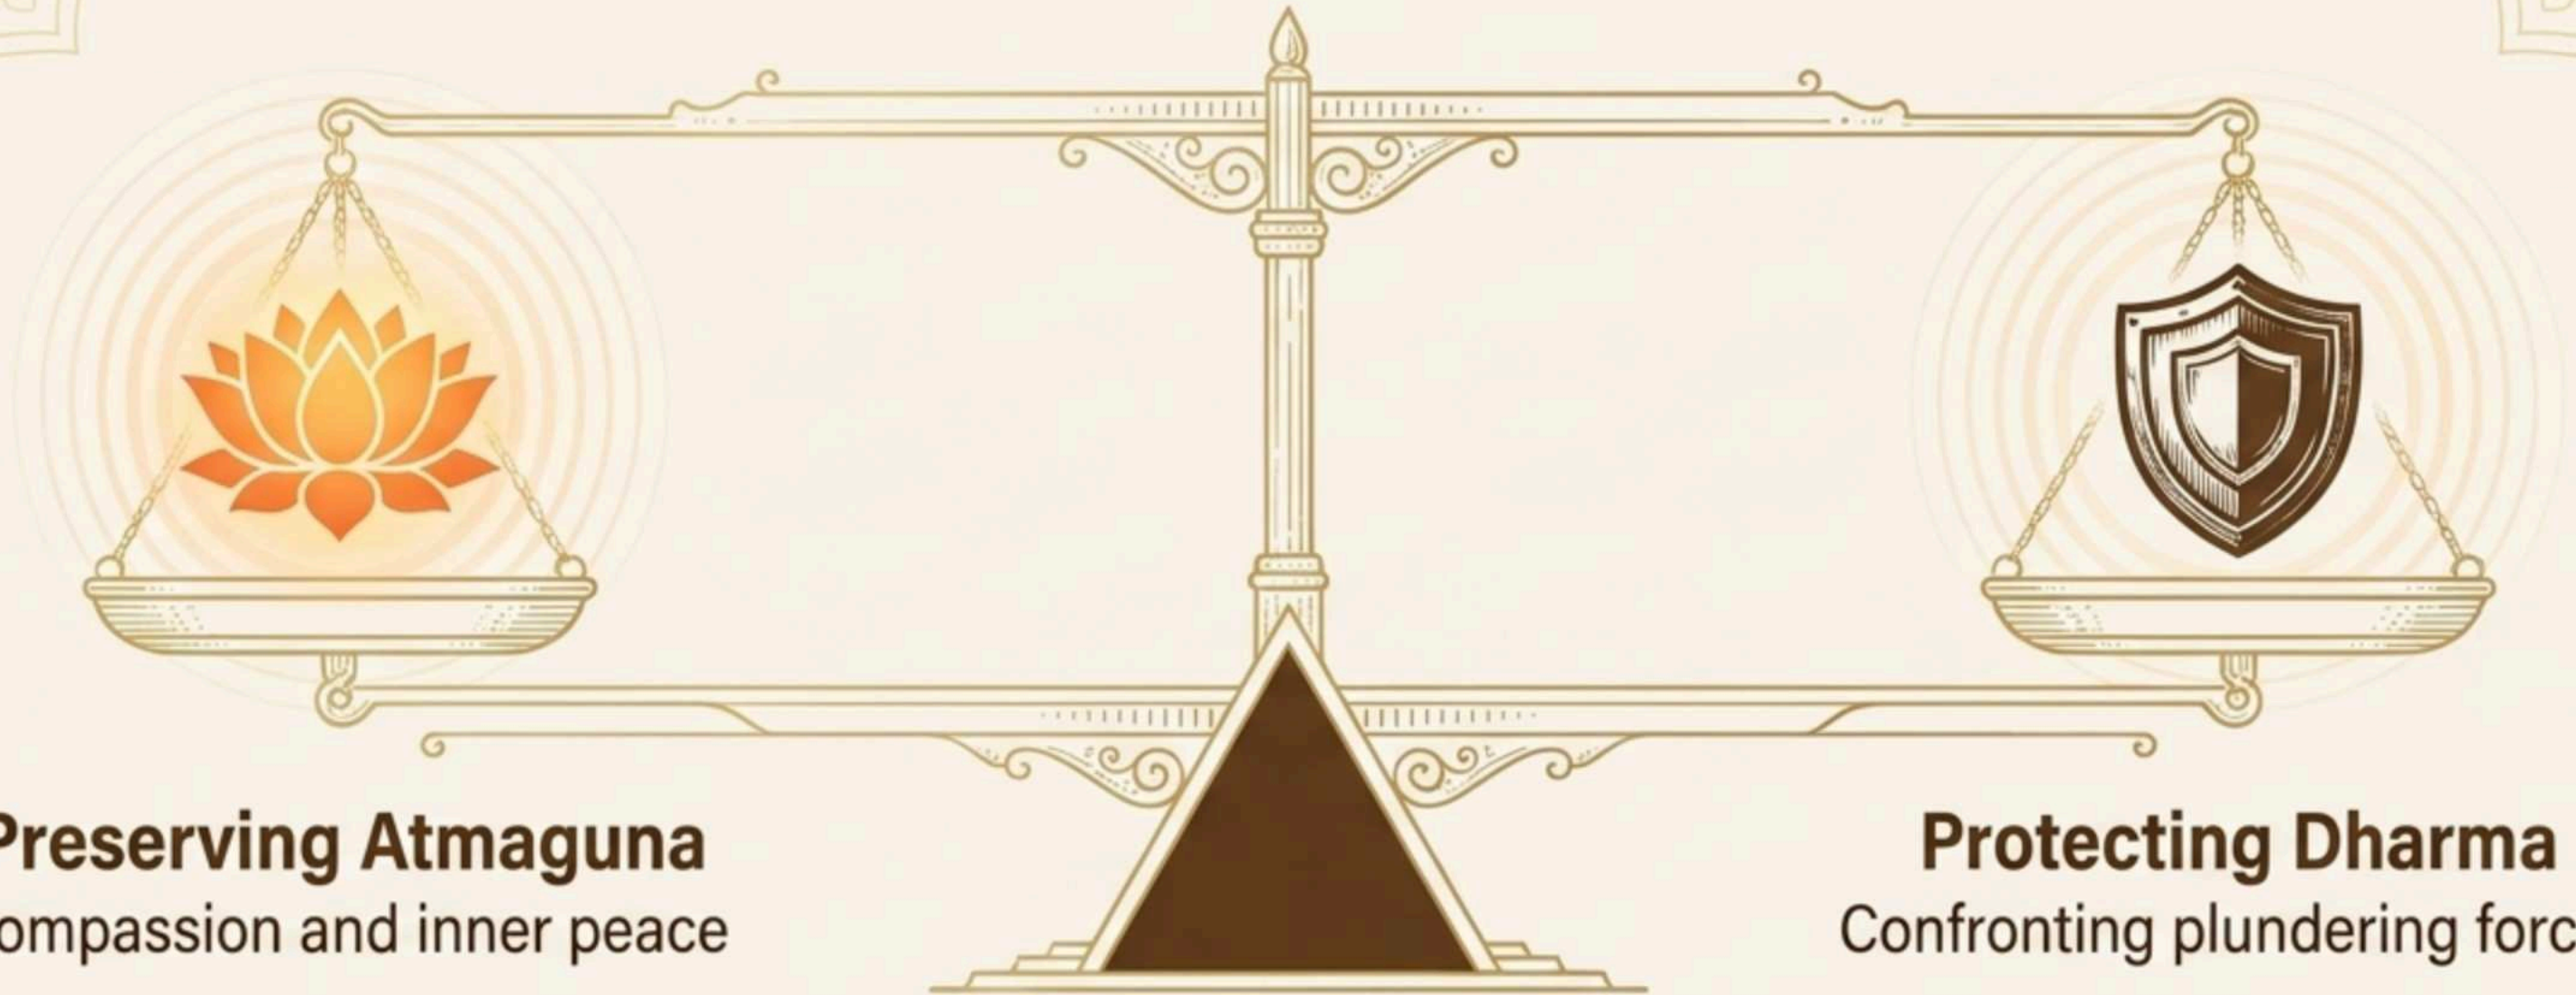

Key Takeaway: Good choices are no longer a moral struggle or an active discipline; they become the default, preferred setting of the mind.

The Spiritual Crosswalk: Cultivation vs. Manifestation

The Practice (Yama/Niyama)	(Mapping)	The Fruit (Atmaguna)
Ahimsa (Non-violence)		Daya (Compassion)
Shaucham (Purity)		Shaucham (Physical/mental purity)
Aparigraha (Non-possessiveness)		Akarpanyam (Generosity)

This is no coincidence. Preserving atmaguna is the practice of yama-niyama, and atmaguna is the full, effortless fruit of that practice.

The Boundaries of Dharma

Preserving Atmaguna
Compassion and inner peace

Protecting Dharma
Confronting plundering forces

Preserving atmaguna does not mean submitting to tyranny. If forces seek to openly plunder one's nation, an enlightened person will confront them—but they will do so while maintaining internal compassion and consideration for the welfare of all beings.

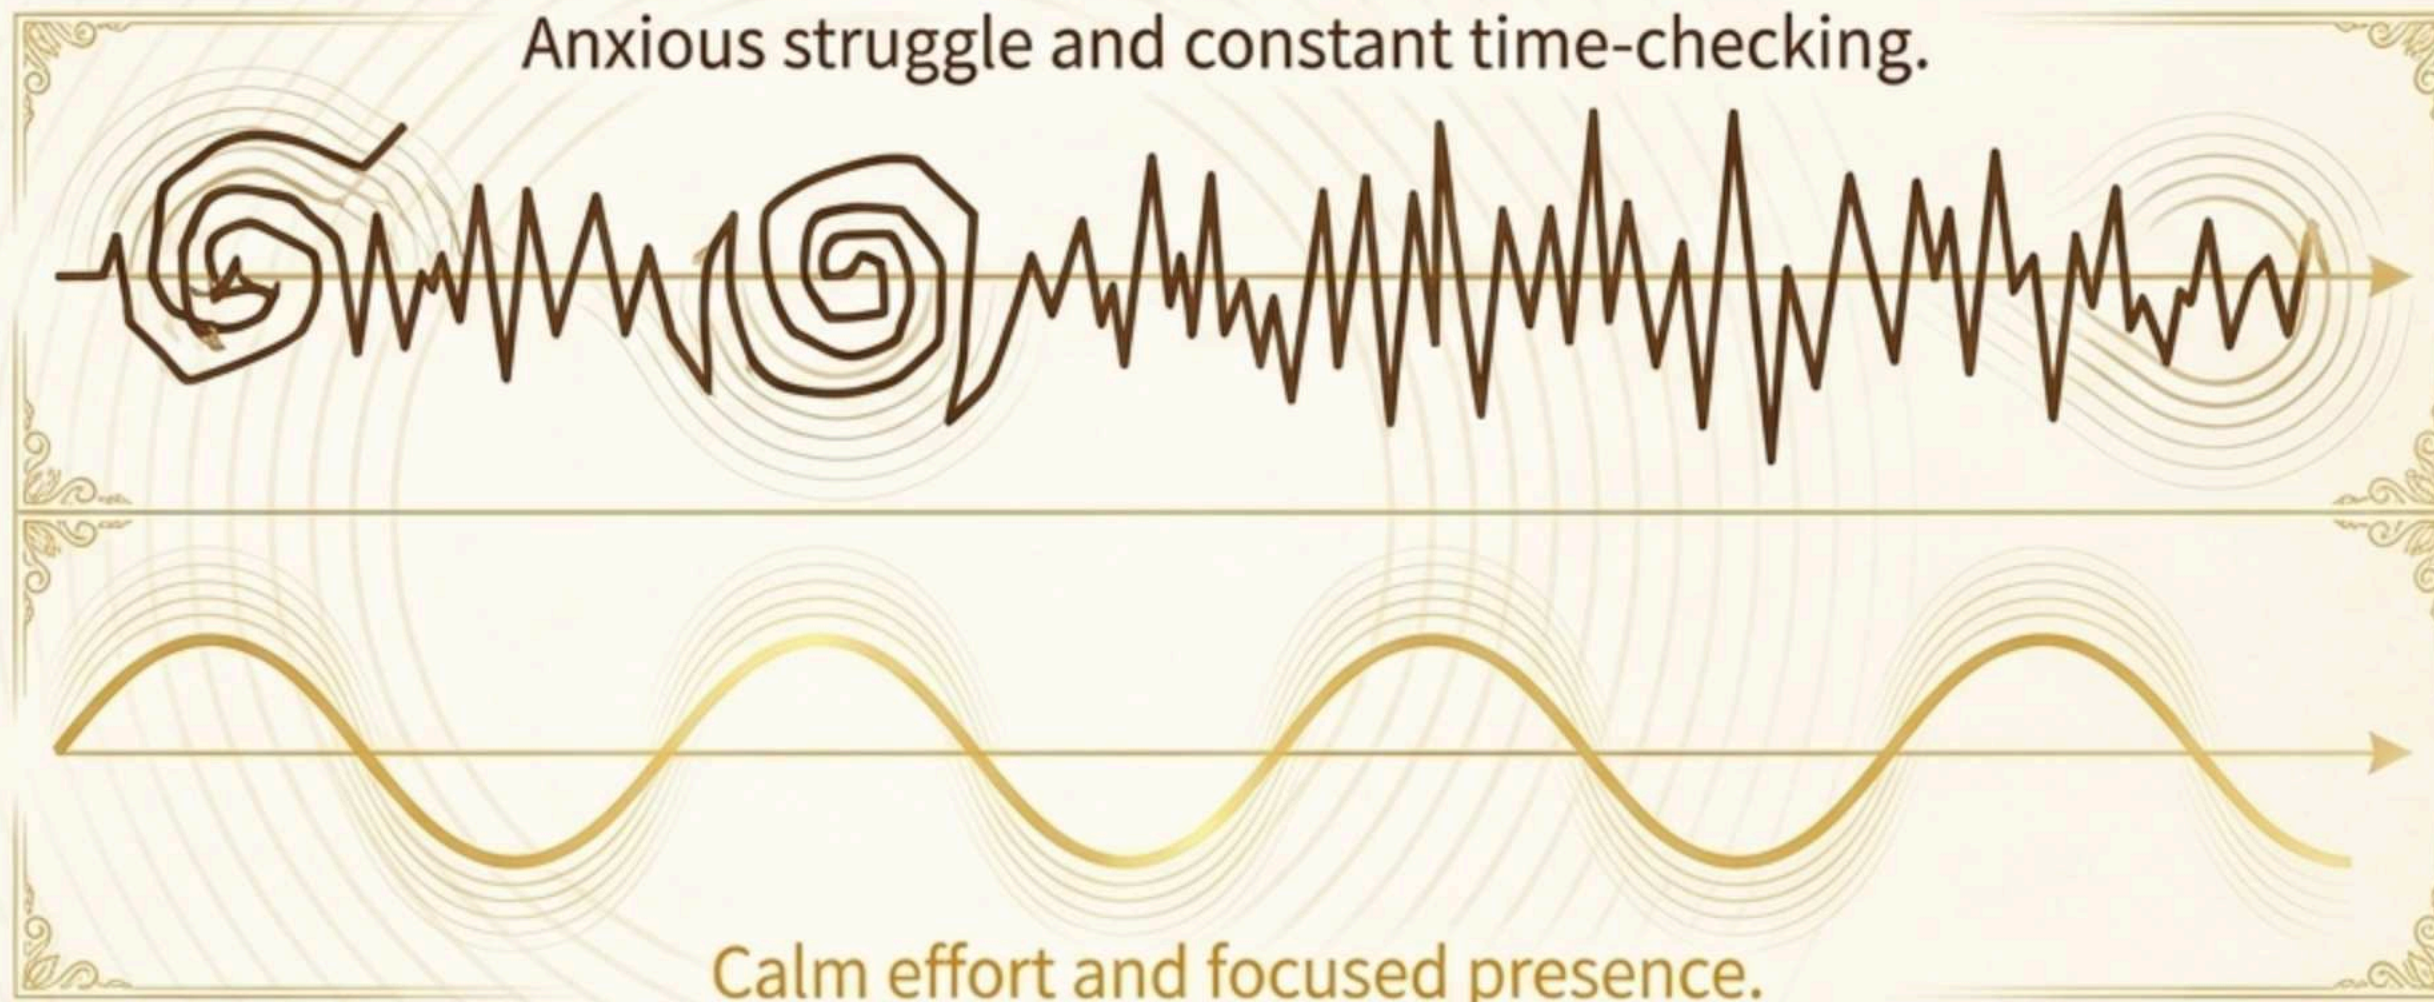

Activity I: The Observer's Audit

Observe your mind for one day. Categorize the 8 qualities without self-criticism, adopting the detached perspective of an observer.

Natural to Me	Requires Effort	Yet to Develop
✓ _____	✓ _____	✓ _____
✓ _____	✓ _____	✓ _____
✓ _____	✓ _____	✓ _____

Activity II: The Practice of Anayasa

The Default

The Practice

Choose one task you usually rush. Do it slowly today. Erase the thought “How much more time?”
Notice how the experience fundamentally shifts when unnecessary agitation is removed.

Activity III: The Bhagavad Gita Lens

Read or listen to the Bhagavad Gita,
Chapter 2, verses 55-58.

This passage describes the sthitaprajna
(one of steady wisdom).

The Prompt: As you read, ask yourself: "Which of the specific eight atmagunah can I observe in this description?"

“When a person has found the true source of joy within themselves, there is simply no place left for envy, greed, or anger. Compassion, generosity, and peace manifest naturally.
